1 Introduction

This starter uses `titling` to reformat `\maketitle` — the pre/post hooks around the title, author and date let a plain `article` class produce a proper separate title page (via the class's own `titlepage` option) without a custom class.

Replace this paragraph with the actual introduction of the document. The point of this second page is to show that the document continues past the title page, the way any real report, thesis chapter or article would.

2 Body

A second section, so the structure of a multi-section document is visible past the title page.
